Five Element Acupressure 300 Hour Certification Program

The Five Element Acupressure Certification Program is designed to enable students of Five Element Acupressure to have their skills recognised and accredited through a program that is transparent and of a high standard of achievement. The student who completes the requirements listed below will receive a certificate of accreditation and listing on The Acupressure Centre website as a Certified Practitioner of Five Element Acupressure.

Requirements

The requirements of this program will be to complete the following three components:

A Courses	112 hours
B Testing	143 hours
C Case Studies	45 hours
TOTAL	300 hours

Students can enter the program at any time after completion of a Level 1 course. This will be by application and payment of an administration fee.

Upon completion of the requirements, students will receive a certificate as a Certified Practitioner of Five Element Acupressure and be entitled to have their contact details, photo and biography listed on the website under the Find A Practitioner menu.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Is this a Government Accredited Program?

No, this program is not Government accredited. The Acupressure Centre is not a Registered Training Organisation and so is not empowered to issue Government recognised certificates or diplomas. Its value rests on the reputation of The Acupressure Centre, the transparency of the accreditation process and the high standard of face-to-face training, supervised practice and testing.

What resources are available for students taking the Program?

Level 1 students are provided with a comprehensive manual which serves them throughout the program. These notes are supplemented by further sets of notes in Levels 2 and 3. John Kirkwood's books The Way of the Five Elements and The Way of the Five Seasons are recommended as they provide additional, parallel material that adds further depth to the manuals. Students are encouraged to read widely and a reading list of recommended titles is included in the Level 1 notes. John also offers ongoing email support for all students in the program.

Is there a time limit to complete the program?

No, there is no time limit for completion of the components of the program.

Can I practise when I've finished the course?

At the completion of the course you will be competent to practise. Of course, you will become more and more competent over time with further practice and study, but you will have the tools to practise straight away. As there is no registration body for Acupressure or other forms of bodywork, anyone can practise no matter what their qualifications. But if you do, it is imperative that you have personal and professional indemnity insurance. Otherwise you may be personally liable if someone sues you.

Where can I get insurance to practise?

The Acupressure Centre is affiliated with the International Institute of Complementary Therapists (IICT) and The Certification Program is recognised by that body. Graduates will be then entitled to become members of IICT and through that organisation, have access to low cost personal and professional indemnity insurance.

I am already practising a complementary health modality. How will this program help me?

Many students who take the courses are already practising remedial massage, kinesiology, naturopathy, Bowen, Reiki or other modalities. All find that Five Element Acupressure integrates well with what they are already doing. Completing the Certification Program adds a powerful tool to their skill set and another credential to their resume.

Will I be able to offer Health Fund rebates?

No, you won't be able to offer health fund rebates unless you have a Government recognised diploma in a recognised modality. Since April 1st 2019 the list of recognised modalities has been considerably reduced. If you want to be able to offer health fund rebates, then you will need to obtain a recognised Diploma of Remedial Massage. You can then offer rebates while incorporating acupressure into remedial massage.

How does Acupressure differ from Acupuncture?

The principles underlying acupuncture and acupressure are the same. The acupoints used are also the same. Acupuncture uses needles inserted into the tissues to stimulate the flow of Qi, while acupressure uses finger pressure which does not penetrate the skin. Sometimes the needle can reach and move the Qi more easily than finger pressure, but a lot has to do with the presence of the practitioner rather than the method used. With constant contact with the points, the acupressure practitioner can continually monitor the process of Qi movement. Moreover, this continuous contact with the client provides therapeutic touch which has a profound influence on the client's receiving of the work. Touch is usually nurturing, holding, relaxing and reassuring and this increases the effectiveness of the work.
